Rag kedhlow pella a-dro dhe'n Akademi, vysytyewgh aga gwiasva.

The four Akademi Kernewek Panels are doing more and more work now and we need more people out with this work. In particular, we need new members of the Place Name Panel. Rod Lyon is about to retire and we thank Rod for all his hard work over the years in this field. So if you have an interest in Cornish place names, contact cornishlanguage@cornwall.gov.uk for more information. You do not need to be fluent in Cornish and it is possible in the first place to come to a Panel meeting to see the work of the Panel before deciding.

The four Akademi Panels and their Chairs are:

- Place Names – Jan Edmonson
- Terminology – Pol Hodge
- Dictionary – Maureen Pierce
- Research – Ken George

The Akademi's biggest project at the moment is the new online dictionary and the Akademi is working with Bangor University to build a new database. When it is published this autumn, the online dictionary will be easier to use and there will be a new page with a Terminology Dictionary where you will be able to search for words from the work of the Terminology Panel and Translation Service.

For further information about the Akademi, go to their website.

These days many people (young people in particular, perhaps!) use the internet to access the language and there are many resources online – the number grows every month. So it's clear that there's a need to produce new resources of this kind and to develop the ones we already have.

One internet service that is still in its infancy is Pellwolok an Gernewegva (Cornish Language TV Online – have you watched it? You can find past programmes here: www.youtube.com/user/KernowPods) and the Cornish Language Fellowship has decided to support its development through a Crowdfunder project. The aim is to raise £6000, and to do that support will be needed from a large number of Cornish speakers, their friends and family, as well as businesses and other organisations.

So this is a call for support! You can make a pledge by going to the Crowdfunder page here: www.crowdfunder.co.uk/cornish-language-tv. Whatever amount you can pledge will be gratefully received.

Let's work together to provide the language with the resources it deserves. And thanks for your help.
